Artist Overview:

The Dustin Ritter Band came together in the fall of 2009 and released their 13 song debut album Dead Airwaves in the summer 2010. The DRB have toured throughout western Canada and were chosen by the Youth Music Movement to represent Saskatchewan for a national compilation album which featured the song and video for "Thought You Should Know". The DRB are currently planning a national tour for 2013/2014 in support of Drunk and Drowning.

Similar Artists: The Band, Foo Fighters, Neil Young, Queens of the Stone Age, Red Hot Chili Peppers, Steve Earle, and Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers.

Key Selling Points:

The DRB's new release Drunk and Drowning is a genre crossing combination of Rock, Roots, Reggae, Punk, Pop, and Soul all blended together into a 30 minute 9 song album. Having made some line up changes from their 2010 debut, the new band members bring a whole new dynamic to the DRB's upbeat melodic rock sound. By adding layers of smooth vocal harmonies and intricate instrumentation, the new songs will make you move to the pulse of the music and leave you singing along with hooks.
